Las Vegas High Schoolers Take a "Bite of Reality" Financial Education Program

Students from three high schools in Las Vegas recently got a "bite of reality" when they attended an interactive financial education simulation designed to teach them how to manage money.

The Nov. 2 event held at The Cosmopolitan of Las Vegas was run by staff from several credit unions, including Clark County Credit Union, Boulder Dam Credit Union, and America First Credit Union. All volunteered their time for the event.

The program is offered by the Richard Myles Johnson (RMJ) Foundation, the state foundation for credit unions in California and Nevada.

The event aims to teach young people the basics of finance by having them take a “real world” test drive complete with a job, money, and the freedom to make their own financial decisions.

The nearly 100 students were given a persona complete with occupation, salary, spouse and family, student loan debt, credit card debt, and medical insurance payments. They then went shopping, “purchasing” items such as housing, transportation, food, clothing, household necessities, and daycare. They dealt with pushy salespeople as well as unexpected expenses and windfalls to learn how to make wise financial choices. And when some overspent, those staffing the “credit union” station provided much-needed assistance.

Krystal Conaway, 17, of Sandy Valley High School, said the event helped her learn how to budget better. “I need to be more careful,” she said. While Shaniece Hicks, 17, of Rancho High School, called it a “great learning experience.”

This taste of reality is exactly what Tena Lozano, executive director of the RMJ Foundation, hopes young people take away from the Bite of Reality program. “Having students experience making financial decisions in a financial simulation, gives them a better understanding of the challenges of adulthood without the real-life risks,” she said.

The Richard Myles Johnson Foundation, founded in 1958, is dedicated to supporting credit union efforts in spreading the financial literacy message to young people. The Foundation offers the Bite of Reality program, a hands-on simulation program that teaches the basics of finances to teenagers. It is funded through donations from credit unions, League chapters, corporations providing credit union services, and individuals.

More information about the Foundation is available at its website at www.rmjfoundation.org.
